Thorne" and "The Bertrams," will write, expressly for HAR-PER's MAGAZINE, a Series of Stories under the general title of "Tales of Many Lands." The First Tale of this Series is conduring the year.

The Publishers renew the assurances which they have so ofter made, that HARPER'S MAGAZINE will continue to maintain the sound conservative position which it has assumed. They do not undervalue the importance of the questions at issue between the different sections and parties of the country. Each of these has organs especially devoted to its advocacy and maintenance. The Publishers of Harffer's Magazing deem it of paramount importance that there should be a periodical which, leaving the discussion of these vexed questions to their own especial advocates and opponents, shall inculcate those principles and set forth those opinions only in which wise and patriotic citizens of every section can heartify concur. Their Magazine will be, as heretofore, the can heartily concur. Their Magazine will be, as heretofore, the organ of no party in politics or sect in religion; but a National work, drawing materials and welcoming contributions from every quarter. The Contributors whose papers appear in its pages, residing in every section of the country have, of course, different personal opinions upon the exciting questions of the day. What these private views are, or how they are expressed, beyond the pages of the Magazine, the Publishers think it out of their province to inquire; but they will exercise the most watchful care that nothing shall find place in any department of the Magazine which shall tender it an unwelcome visiter in any household.

> MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS, T. BABINGTON MACAULAY. New and Revised Edition. Five vols., 12mo. Cloth, $3 75.

ElOGRAPHICAL AND HISTORICAL SKETCHES. One vol., 12mo. Cloth, 75 cents.

It was on these essays—chiefly contributions to the Edinbur Review—that Macaniay's colossal reputation was origins founded; and it was precisely these and the contributions sydney Smith and Lords Jedrey and Brougham, which gas such immense popularity to the feview. The essays on Chiefly and Hastings form a most lively, graphic, and complete histor of the founding and confirming of the fittids dominant in indicate the founding and satisfactory. Those of Bacon and Addison, and other and satisfactory. Those of Bacon and Addison, and other and satisfactory. Those of Bacon and Addison, and other and interest. One reads these volumes, pulses them in the brary, and after a short period, returns to them again, finding less entertainment in the current publications of the day than in these claborate and beautiful compositions.

OR, THE INDIVIDUAL AND ORGANIC HARMONY OF GOD AND MAN.
By EDWARD BRECHER, D. D.,
Author of "The Conflict of Ages."
In 1 vol., 13mo. Price $125.

This is essentially a new and independent work; not a repetition or reinforcement of the author's "Condict of Ac nor yet a mere following in the track of objections for the pose of reply.

The first book was mainly destructive—assailing and desting the islate foundations of the received system with the post or constructive elements rather indicated than clearly urount.

tion of all things thereby, is the simple and yet sublime subject of the work.

It leads to and demands a revision not only of the theology, but of all the thinking of past ages, and of their practical life also, from a new and lofty point of vision, from which the system of this world has never been surveyed before.

The words is not merely speculative. It is profoundly and universally practical. No mun can avoid meeting its principles and problems, and coming to some decision upon them.

Though the discussions are profound and far reaching, they are not at all above the common understanding, but are essentially popular and open to the comprehension of all.

The importance of the theme, the eminent ability of the author, and the universal interest excited by his former powerful and original work, warrant the publishers in calling attention to THE CONCORD OF Attests are not the most remarkable essays in the domain of theological speculation or of practical life. ne domain of theological speculation or of practical life.
